

Research Group Sees Doubled Income In Next 30 Years

WASHINGTON, June 14 — The Committee for Economic Development said today that the average man's purchasing power will double in the next 30 years, if production per man hour of work continues to rise as it has in the past.

The noted research organization declared, however, that achievement of this goal will depend on whether conditions which have produced present high living standards are maintained.

The CED listed ten ways which it said offer promise of continuing these conditions. One of these is a reform of the tax system "to make risk taking more attractive." The others:

1. Stabilize the growth of industry and "avoid serious business recessions."
2. Reduce seasonal unemployment. Ways of doing this include stock-piling goods in off-seasons and dove-tailing production of articles with different seasonal peaks.
3. Improve the quality of new businesses established and reduce "infant mortality" among business concerns. Business schools should pay more attention to teaching students to be owners.
4. Stimulate more rapid replacement of equipment. Experiences of Britain and France show the failure of keeping equipment up to date limits a nation's productive capacity.
5. Increase imports in relation to exports. The U. S. should continue the "selective reduction of tariffs." By reducing the need for foreign aid, increased imports would make tax reduction possible.
6. Provide more employment opportunities for older people. Otherwise, national output will fall short of possibilities and "the burden of supporting retired workers will be heavy."
7. Improve incentives for efficiency among the rank and file of workers. The spread of seniority rules in the last ten or 15 years has "seriously weakened incentives among the hourly-rated employees."
8. Develop regular methods of drawing upon the knowledge and training of the labor force.
9. Abolish make-work rules and feather-bedding.

The CED said the tax system should be changed to "avoid imposing special burdens on hazardous ventures."

"A tax system which artificially causes would-be investors to prefer safe investments," it explained, "discourages pioneering, makes the economy less progressive, and therefore retards the rise of the standard of living."

The organization said "it ought to be possible to raise real wages in the future as rapidly as in the past." This would mean, it declared, "that in slightly less than 30 years from now the real wages per hour of the average worker would have doubled."

NO RED ATTACK PLANNED
Army Hoping To Carry New A-Bomb In Suitcase

WASHINGTON, June 14—The United States Army is working today on an active project to build atomic war heads into shells that can be fired by ordinary field artillery.

The Army, utilizing new scientific information, hopes to develop atomic missiles weighing less than 300 pounds.

The warheads, to be fired from conventional-sized field artillery guns and in guided missiles, are expected to be available within two to five years.

The probability of such small-package atomic exploders is understood to have been established since the Defense Department's annual report to Congress was issued April 22.

Their successful development would raise anew the possibility, once scoffed at by scientists, that "an atomic bomb could be carried in a suitcase."

A B-36 BOMBER built to deliver one atomic bomb from 10,000 miles could carry a dozen or more if artillery-size bombs could be used.

It is assumed that even though varying in power, atomic explosions are all in the same order of size, in the sense that they dwarf conventional explosions.

Information now available throws light on Army Gen. J. Lawton Collins' statement last week that it is "by no means impossible" to build an artillery piece that would fire an atomic shell.

'Smalt' Blanket Hanging Over Pacific Area

HONOLULU, June 14 — A strange, vast, layer of smoke and microscopic salt particles hovered today over more than a million square miles of the Pacific, blanketing all Hawaii and stretching as far west as Wake Island.

Honolulu's weatherman said the enormous haze, dubbed "smalt," was composed mostly of salt evaporated from the ocean and trapped close to the earth's surface by stable air.

He said no strong winds, capable of dissipating the "smalt," are in sight for at least 36 hours.

Volcanic fumes from Hawaii's Mauna Loa, which has been erupting for more than a week, are contributing to the density of the low-hanging atmospheric blanket, according to the weather bureau.

Dr. George O. Burr, scientist at the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Experimental Station, said two Geiger counters are being checked continuously, but have shown no signs of atomic radiation such as might be caused by an explosion at the Eniwetok atom weapons proving station.

There was speculation at first that such a blast might have caused the "smalt." The haze has covered the entire Hawaiian Islands for two nights and a day.

Hens Expected To Set Record

WASHINGTON, June 14—U. S. barnyard queens are priming to lay more eggs this year than ever before.

The Agriculture Department said today that the nation's hens will produce about five billion dozen eggs in 1950. That is slightly more than an egg a day for every man, woman and child in the U. S.

The last record egg lay was accomplished in 1944 when 4.9 billion dozen were produced. Last year's output was 4.7 billion dozen.

Women Treasurer Of U.S. Ends First Year, Says She Has Loved Every Minute On Job

WASHINGTON, June 14—Georgia Neese Clark feels that she has worked too hard all her life to sit back and be a bureaucrat now.

Mrs. Clark, who celebrates her first anniversary as treasurer of the United States just one week from today, says that the last year has been about the busiest of her life—and she says she has loved every minute of it.

She has, in fact, turned out to be one of the administration's most valuable feminine assets on the chicken ala king and green peas circuit although she almost never makes a political speech.

Instead, she speaks to bankers' associations, bond drives, local chambers of commerce, college groups and women's organizations. Almost always, she addresses them on their own problems and circumstances.

A most attractive and persuasive brunette at 50, it is easy to see why even bankers would rather look at her than at her signature on, say, a thousand dollar bill.

The women's division of the Democratic National Committee, impressed by her success as a public speaker, recently drafted her to act as a "professor" at the "Fair Deal Facts Seminar" where other Democratic women studied the art.

In addition to her duties in the Treasury Department and her voluntary travels as a Democratic ambassador-of-good-will, Mrs. Clark still finds time to oversee her business enterprises back in Kansas.

Mrs. Clark was an actress until 1934 when she went to work as a cashier in the Richland, Kans., State Bank. Within four years she had worked her way up to become the bank president.

Eventually she expanded her business operations to include the ownership of several farms, a grain elevator and a general store.

U.S. Won't Sit In Parlor With Shotgun, Chief Says

DALLAS, Tex., June 14—Secretary of State Acheson declared last night that international co-operation backed by a strengthened free world—and not an atomic attack on Russia in a "preventive war"—must be employed to meet the threat of Communism.

The State Department chief lashed out at Americans who advocate such an attack, although he recognized the possibility that Soviet leaders "may be tempted to make use of military force" whenever they are strong enough to do so.

Acheson delivered a major foreign policy address under the joint sponsorship of the Civic Federation of Dallas and the Community Course of Southern Methodist University. The speech was the first in a series that he will make during the next few weeks.

"The foreign policy of the United States," he explained, "is to strengthen the free world to prevent aggression and to cooperate with all friendly nations in advancing the common welfare."

The secretary said that policy includes the creation of a united military, economic and political community of nations so strong that Moscow will be "forced" to respect it.

IN REJECTING the idea that U. S. A-bombs be used to forestall Russia's plans for aggression, Acheson declared:

"All responsible men agree that such a course is unthinkable for us. It would violate every moral principle of our people. It would create a war that would necessarily be incredibly destructive. It would not solve problems. It would multiply them."

At the same time, the cabinet member also assailed isolationists who, he said, advocate "bargain-basement security." He charged:

"They want the United States to pull down the blinds and sit in the parlor with a loaded shotgun, waiting."

Acheson said that such "bargain-basement security" would force vast increases in the domestic military establishment and would in fact be a "vain attempt to remain an island of security in a Soviet dominated world."

"It does not work—and it is not cheap," he emphasized.

Early Wheat Cut Is Seen

July 4 Combining Is Expert's Guess

Larry A. Best, Pickaway County agricultural agent, took a long look over this area's wheat fields and "guessed" that first combining would come early this year—"probably before the Fourth of July."

"All depends," the farm expert says, "on whether we get too much cool, wet weather." And while saying this, he observed that "we could use some more rain. It is surprising how dry the ground really is."

While Best was predicting an early Winter wheat harvest, the weatherman declared that Wednesday would be a "nice Summer day" with maybe a few scattered showers.

The forecaster said that the upper two thirds of Ohio had a thick cloud cover Wednesday morning, but he added that the sun broke through at most points later in the day.

Although no rain is in the official forecast, Mr. Weatherman said that there is a 50-50 chance that some showers may hit a few parts of the state late Wednesday.

The weatherman also reported that the day's high marks would reach into the mid-80s with the humidity somewhat higher than the last few days.

THURSDAY WILL BE rather cloudy with a slight drop in the mercury in the north portion and showers likely in the west and south.

The weather bureau's weekly report for June 4-10 stated that temperatures were generally favorable for the growth of crops with the exception of Sunday and Monday, when it was too cool.

"About all of the rain for the week occurred late Friday and early Saturday," the report said. "These showers were timely as (Continued on Page Two)

Overtime Pay For Firemen Out

CLEVELAND, June 14 — The city of Cleveland and other cities in the state will not have to pay their firemen time and a half for overtime.

The Ohio supreme court today refused to review the appeal of Cleveland Fire Lieutenant James E. Taylor, who charged the city's platoon system caused him to work more than 48 hours a week.

His petition asked for $11,963 as time and a half. The common pleas court awarded him $3,688, but was reversed by the eighth district appellate court which dismissed his suit.

$50,000 Asked By Kinderhook Man In Suit

A damage suit seeking $50,000 has been filed in Pickaway County common pleas court against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company by John Parrett.

The plaintiff claims that on April 29, 1949 he started across the company's track in Kinderhook in his car and was struck by a locomotive.

Parrett accuses the railroad of negligence, claims that no whistle was sounded, that the locomotive was traveling too fast and that a view of the track was obstructed by coal cars on a siding.

The plaintiff's petition states that in the collision he suffered a brain concussion, face lacerations, broken nose, broken clavicle, broken ribs, an injured knee joint and head contusions.

Russia Points To Her New Budget As 'Sign' Of Desire For Peace

MOSCOW, June 14—The Moscow Communist newspaper Pravda declared today that Russia's announced intention to spend 18.5 percent of its 1950-51 budget for military purposes proves the peaceful intent of the Soviets.

The budget announced last night totals a record-breaking 427 billion, 900 million rubles, or 106 billion, 975 million dollars.

The newspaper in an editorial lauded the announcement and contrasted the planned expenditures for defense with the military outlay of Western Powers, particularly the United States.

Pravda took the occasion to attack American "ruling circles" which it said "under the influence of a nightmare, plan world domination and have taken the road to undermining the United Nations and preparing for a new world war."

The newspaper asserted that the U. S. military expenditures have risen 68 percent whereas the Russian budget calls for only 18.5 percent for defense.

(Editors Note: The new Soviet budget calls for a larger outlay for military needs than the 1949-50 budget in terms of rubles.)

(RUSSIA VALUES the ruble at 25 cents in U. S. currency, a figure several times that accorded the ruble by other sources. But, at the Soviet valuation, the Russian military budget is 50 percent more than that of the United States—13 billion 350 millions for 1950-51.)

(Comparison also is made difficult by differences in the items included under military expenditures and the lack of a reliable index on purchasing power.)

Pravda said that the Soviet defense expenditure in the first year after the war totalled 23.9 percent of the budget and added:

"Thus every item of income and expenditure in our budget clearly reflects the peaceful, creative labor of the Soviet people."

Pravda charged that the U. S. military expenditure for 1950-51 amounts to 76 percent of the budget and termed it an "aggressive military budget."

Percentage-wise, the military outlay in the huge budget is smaller than that for last year when 19 percent of the total budget was allocated to the armed forces.

Finance Minister A. G. Zverev, in putting the budget before a combined session of both houses of the Supreme Soviet, hailed the cut in military expenditures as evidence that Russia "consistently is pursuing a peace policy." He added:

"This policy minds complete support among all progressive mankind."

PREMIER STALIN received a thunderous three-minute ovation when he appeared at the joint session. All members of the powerful Politburo were on hand.

The government estimate is that the end of the fiscal year will find a surplus of 4.1 billion rubles ($1.25 billion).

The surplus for the preceding year was six times as large and the decrease was attributed by Zverev to the lowering of wholesale and retail prices by government-controlled agencies.

Zverev said the budget showed the fast progress made by the Russians toward fulfilling the postwar five-year plan and reflects plans for boosting both industrial and agricultural production in the coming year.

Foreign Aid Plan Boosting Payroll By 100 A Day

WASHINGTON, June 14—Congress was told today that the foreign military aid program is adding 100 employees a day to the federal payroll.

The Joint Committee on the Reduction of Federal Spending said in a report that as of May 1, nearly 10,000 civilian employees had been assigned to the aid program.

The report, prepared under the direction of Sen. Byrd, (D) Va., committee chairman, stated that there were 2,093,312 federal civilian employees during April, an increase over March of 1,417.

The Postoffice Department and the Veterans Administration each cut their payrolls by several thousands, but these reductions were more than compensated by increases in the Army and Airforce, the Departments of Agriculture, Interior and Commerce and the Housing Agency.

While the Army showed a boost of 2,008 in civilian employees and the Airforce a boost of 1,217, the Navy's civilian payroll dropped 1,047.

The report showed that as of the end of April the military aid program had 9,567 civilians on its staff, an increase of 3,703 over the March figure.

The workers were assigned from other departments in these numbers: 120 from the State Department, 12 from the Marshall Plan program, 35 from the Office of the Defense secretary, 6,601 from the Army, 632 from the Airforce, 2,167 from the Navy.

Payroll figures were not available for April. The March total was one million, 649 thousand dollars, a $469 thousand increase over February.

5,000 To March In Flag Parade

CLEVELAND, June 14—Some 5,000 Greater Clevelanders are expected to march tonight in a parade saluting the 173rd anniversary of the official adoption by Congress of the Flag of the United States of America.

Additional thousands of citizens are expected to line downtown streets to watch the city's 19th annual Flag Day parade.

Bellefontaine Eyes Income Tax

BELLEFONTAINE, June 14—Bellefontaine city council will meet Monday to determine whether to submit at a special election a proposal for a one-half of one percent city income tax levy.

The levy has been urged by the city finance committee. The expected revenue would be used to provide a blanket pay increase for all city employees and to carry out a street and storm-water drainage program.

Percentagewise, the military outlay in the huge budget is smaller than that for last year when 19 percent of the total budget was allocated to the armed forces.

Finance Minister A. G. Zverev, in putting the budget before a combined session of both houses of the Supreme Soviet, hailed the cut in military expenditures as evidence that Russia "consistently is pursuing a peace policy." He added:

"This policy minds complete support among all progressive mankind."

*****

PREMIER STALIN received a thunderous three-minute ovation when he appeared at the joint session. All members of the powerful Politburo were on hand.

The government estimate is that the end of the fiscal year will find a surplus of 4.1 billion rubles ($1.25 billion).

The surplus for the preceding year was six times as large and the decrease was attributed by Zverev to the lowering of wholesale and retail prices by government-controlled agencies.

Zverev said the budget showed the fast progress made by the Russians toward fulfilling the postwar five-year plan and reflects plans for boosting both industrial and agricultural production in the coming year.

Security Bill Accord Near

HIGHER CEILING Being Debated

WASHINGTON, June 14 — A compromise is near today on one of the controversial issues in the Social Security bill—whether to set covered wages at $3,000 or $3,600 a year.

Majority Leader Lucas, (D) Ill., is ready to offer his amendment to set the coverage ceiling at the House-passed $3,600 instead of the $3,000 provided by the present act and recommended by the Senate Finance Committee.

Finance Chairman George, (D) Ga., said he will accept the amendment "if we can settle some other issues at the same time."

George said he hoped for settlement of the Lucas-Myers demand for retention of the so-called "increment factor" by which, under present law, a worker's pension benefit is increased by one percent for each year he has paid payroll taxes.

The House set the increment factor at one-half of one percent yearly. The Senate committee knocked it out. Lucas and Sen. Myers, (D) Pa., contend that it would be unfair "if one who contributes for 45 years gets no (Continued on Page Two)

5,000 To March In Flag Parade

CLEVELAND, June 14—Some 5,000 Greater Clevelanders are expected to march tonight in a parade saluting the 173rd anniversary of the official adoption by Congress of the Flag of the United States of America.

Additional thousands of citizens are expected to line downtown streets to watch the city's 19th annual Flag Day parade.

Farmer Loses Railroad Suit

COLUMBUS, June 14—The Ohio supreme court today refused to admit to review the taxpayers suit of Marvin Thompson against the New York Central Railroad.

Thompson, a Hardin County farmer, filed the suit against the railroad to compel it to pay statutory penalty of up to $60 a day for its alleged failure to keep its fences in repair along its right-of-way. The farmer claimed the fence along his property failed to turn cattle.

Women Treasurer Of U.S. Ends First Year, Says She Has Loved Every Minute On Job

WASHINGTON, June 14—Georgia Neese Clark feels that she has worked too hard all her life to sit back and be a bureaucrat now.

Mrs. Clark, who celebrates her first anniversary as treasurer of the United States just one week from today, says that the last year has been about the busiest of her life—and she says she has loved every minute of it.

She has, in fact, turned out to be one of the administration's most valuable feminine assets on the chicken ala king and green peas circuit although she almost never makes a political speech.

Instead, she speaks to bankers' associations, bond drives, local chambers of commerce, college groups and women's organizations. Almost always, she addresses them on their own problems and circumstances.

A most attractive and persuasive brunette at 50, it is easy to see why even bankers would rather look at her than at her signature on, say, a thousand dollar bill.

The women's division of the Democratic National Committee, impressed by her success as a public speaker, recently drafted her to act as a "professor" at the "Fair Deal Facts Seminar" where other Democratic women studied the art.

In addition to her duties in the Treasury Department and her voluntary travels as a Democratic ambassador-of-good-will, Mrs. Clark still finds time to oversee her business enterprises back in Kansas.

Mrs. Clark was an actress until 1934 when she went to work as a cashier in the Richland, Kans., State Bank. Within four years she had worked her way up to become the bank president.

Eventually she expanded her business operations to include the ownership of several farms, a grain elevator and a general store.

TWO OF SEVEN PUPPIES, buried alive in a clump of weeds in Chicago, are examined by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dimit and Allen Glisch (right), minutes after they had been rescued. The other five were dead. Dimit's attention was attracted by a whining sound. When he saw the nose of one of the baby fox-terriers emerging from the ground, he dug the puppy up, then found a second alive.

Bellefontaine Eyes Income Tax

BELLEFONTAINE, June 14—Bellefontaine city council will meet Monday to determine whether to submit at a special election a proposal for a one-half of one percent city income tax levy.

The levy has been urged by the city finance committee. The expected revenue would be used to provide a blanket pay increase for all city employees and to carry out a street and storm-water drainage program.

more than one who contributes for only 1½ years."

The finance chairman previously opposed the ceiling boost on covered wages and salaries from the present $3,000 a year to $3,600 on grounds that while it would boost the maximum individual pension to $80, the higher-salaried man would get a smaller return on his contributions.

The pension basis under the committee bill is 50 percent of the first $100 of average monthly wage, plus 15 percent of the remainder. Thus a man who averaged $3,600 a year or more—or $300 a month—would get $80 a month pension.

It had been about a week since the last rain. Some of the heaviest showers occurred where they were needed the most—northwestern and west-central counties.

Safety Chief Studies New Parking Meters

Like the old woman in the shoe, Safety Director C. O. Leist Wednesday had so many parking meters he didn't know which to choose.

He said six meters of different makes are being studied to determine which will give the best performance—and most of them are set up for display on his desk in City Building.

Each of the meters is of the two-hour variety, Leist explained, and will take from one to 10 pennies, five pennies and a nickel or two nickels. He added that no decision has been made yet concerning which meter will be selected.

The meters, when the decision is made, will be placed on North Court street from Watt to High street, on West Franklin street and East Main street. Leist said there will be a sprinkling of them along East Franklin street.

NAVY BONE BANK PAYS OFF

A Navy technician processes a rib under sterile conditions for the bank.

By JOHN GOETTE

Central Press Staff Writer

UNCLE SAM'S NAVY reveals that it is doing nicely in the banking business. This is not a financial enterprise but rather a hoarding of human bones instead of dollars.

From the bone bank of the Naval Hospital, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., has come preserved bone for 26 successful grafts since September, 1949.

Ready availability of bone without subjecting the patient to the pain and suffering of formidable operations is hailed by the naval medics as a "real advance in orthopedics."

While such preserved bone is not always the equal of a graft taken from one healthy part of the patient and immediately transferred to the injured or diseased area of the same patient, the difference between fresh and preserved bone is not so great as to preclude many uses for suitably preserved bone.

THE NAVY has discovered that its bone bank shortens operating time by an average of 30 per cent. It further makes possible a single operation instead of two or more required in moving a patient's bone from one area to another.

The need for a second operating team is reduced, and the routine practice of blood transfusions is almost eliminated. Patients complain less of pain and are spared a long, shocking operation, which means quicker recovery.

Pettits Find One Son; Second Is Just Behind

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Pettit arrived home just one half hour before their son, Jack, who went all the way to Washington D. C. to meet and missed.

The Pettits of North Pickaway street and Miss Mary Katherine Morgan of East Main street moved east for the two Pettit boys—Tom, third classman in the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, and Jack, serving with the United States Navy.

They picked up Tom in Annapolis and also Jack Amendt of Lancaster according to schedule. Motoring to Washington D. C., they failed to make connections with Jack, who was to arrive by train from Virginia. When they managed to get in touch with him they found that he had missed connections.

The Pettits had engine trouble in Parkersburg, W. Va., and were delayed. They left Parkersburg at 8:45 a. m. Jack arrived in Parkersburg by bus at 9:15 a. m.

The Pettits had only been home a few minutes when Jack walked into the North Pickaway street home. He will leave Friday, Tom's vacation, however, is a 42-day leave.

Thirsty Thieves Pick Up Cash, Whisky, Beer

Thieves with a thirst broke into a South Washington street restaurant early Wednesday morning and stole merchandise and cash worth approximately $100.

The intruders apparently were surprised during their looting of Carle's Place by Merchant Policeman Walter Crissinger.

Their departure was hurried. They took with them only one case of whisky, leaving three neatly piled in the backyard, ready for loading. The thieves also took between $12 and $15 in change and between 20 and 25 cartons of cigarettes, according to Proprietor Carle Snider.

Police Chief William McCrady said the thieves entered by ripping a screen off the window of the men's washroom in the rear of the building. Then they pried open the window, entered and pried the washroom door off its hinges.

BEFORE THEIR hurried departure the intruders apparently sat down at the kitchen table for a convivial round of congratulations. Snider said one bottle of whisky and three bottles of beer were left there.

Chief McCrady said the case was being investigated closely. Crissinger, whose arrival apparently alarmed the thieves, has hotly denied recent rumors that he may soon resign.

Another break-in was reported to police by W. H. Stedman, proprietor of the Walnut Street Greenhouse, who said someone had broken in and stolen $12.24 in cash and a check worth $3.80.

The main purpose in developing atomic artillery and guided missiles is to achieve greater accuracy than can be obtained with the air-dropped bombs.

The Army believes that valuable atomic explosives could not be used for tactical purposes unless accuracy was greater than is usual for bombing.

Against troops, it is expected that atomic explosives could be used only when the enemy concentrated, to attack, to cross a river or to pass through a defile. Atomic explosives might be used against massed tanks, but not if a cheaper and more efficient means of destroying the tanks was available.

The main purpose in developing atomic artillery and guided missiles is to achieve greater accuracy than can be obtained with the air-dropped bombs.

The Army believes that valuable atomic explosives could not be used for tactical purposes unless accuracy was greater than is usual for bombing.

Against troops, it is expected that atomic explosives could be used only when the enemy concentrated, to attack, to cross a river or to pass through a defile. Atomic explosives might be used against massed tanks, but not if a cheaper and more efficient means of destroying the tanks was available.

Study Group Wants Ohio Roads To Last 100 Years

COLUMBUS, June 14 — The Ohio Highway Users Conference has come up with the highly attractive suggestion that Buckeye roads should be built to last at least 100 years.

The conference is an organization backed heavily by the petroleum interests. Its members are the legislative and public relations agents of the Chamber of Commerce, the Farm Bureau, truckers and brewery associations and other groups that operate their own trucks.

The report finds it fascinating that many roads in the United States and Europe have lasted well over 100 years, while the state highway department recommends only that a highway should be good for 15 or 20 years.

The conference strongly suggests that the difficulty lies in the materials used in building the road bases, and not the wearing surfaces of Ohio highways.

It recommends that the highway study committee "seriously consider a program through which the state would build only these super-sturdy, long-life roads."

IN ITS REPORT the conference finds there should be no new taxes to finance such building because "Ohio highway users this year will pay 62 and a half percent of $200 million for all highway purposes."

It also makes four other recommendations. They are:

1. Conference members should look into the soundness of the highway department's estimate of needs and consider the quality of Ohio's roads as compared with those of other states.

Dean Baker further pointed out that the weakest field in religion is church administration.

5 Thugs Get $1,440 In Raid

CLEVELAND, June 14—Police are searching today for five robbers and safecrackers who escaped with $1,440 after tying up two men and two women in an apartment house on Cleveland's east side.

According to detectives, the men hammered open a basement vault late yesterday and emptied it of the life savings of Frank Evans, 51, owner of the apartment.

Evans and three tenants, Mrs. Anne Williams, 40, Mrs. Jean Shy, 20, and William Morrison, were bound hand and foot by bed sheets and adhesive tape, police said.

Ohio Universalists Schedule Parley

COLUMBUS, June 14 — The Ohio State Universalist Convention opens here today.

Running through Sunday, the tenth annual convention will be held in conjunction with the 125th anniversary celebration of the Universalist Church of Ohio. The first Universalist church in Ohio was established in Jacksonburg, Butler County, in 1826.

Ashville Area Farmers Book Mass Meeting

Chief Frank Tedrow of Ashville volunteer fire department has announced that the 800-gallon tank truck owned and operated by the volunteer fire department of Canal Winchester will be on inspection at Ashville high school Thursday evening.

Farmers of Madison, Scioto, Harrison and Walnut Townships will meet with the Ashville volunteer firemen in the high school at 8 p. m. for a discussion concerning an agreement between the farmers and the firemen for better rural fire protection.

According to the present proposal, each of the farmers would pledge $25 toward the purchase of a tank truck and assure firemen of net less than $5 or more than $10 each year for the maintenance of the new equipment.

The program scheduled for the mass meeting will begin with a film on the danger of fire and its control. Chief Tedrow will welcome the farmers and introduce the volunteer firemen after which Walter J. Lauder, retired fire chief of Portsmouth, will explain the course of instruction in fire fighting recently completed by the firemen. Chief A. C. Root of Canal Winchester and a representative of the state fire marshal's office also will speak.

JOE REIS, assistant fire chief of Ashville, and Harry Margulis, attorney, will explain in detail the proposed plan for the organization of the incorporation.

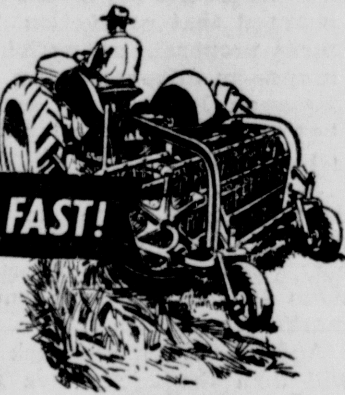

Each farmer will be asked to signify his interest and two representatives from each township will be selected to meet with a committee from the volunteer fire department to work out the final working arrangements. An opportunity for questions will be offered to answer any specific questions.

The Rev. C. A. Holmquist of Ashville will be chairman of the meeting.

IN ITS REPORT the conference finds there should be no new taxes to finance such building because "Ohio highway users this year will pay 62 and a half percent of $200 million for all highway purposes."

It also makes four other recommendations. They are:

1. Conference members should look into the soundness of the highway department's estimate of needs and consider the quality of Ohio's roads as compared with those of other states.

The joint congressional committee on the economic report has estimated that Ohio needs $4.5 billion to bring its roads up to par. The conference apparently feels this is excessive.

2. An exhaustive study of the effect of commercial traffic upon our highways and the development of a policy for the construction and use of our highways that will be equitable to all interests.

3. That the highway study committee ascertain the facts relating to the specifications of materials with a view to finding the extent to which local materials may suitably and economically be used.

The inference here was that roads could be built more cheaply through saving long hauling charges and patronizing local industry if local materials were specified.

4. That all highway users and their organizations take more interest in plans and specifications for construction of highways "since it is their money that is being spent."

The conference claimed that in the next 20 years, highway agencies will have twice the money from gas taxes and license fees that they did in the last 20. It contended this forthcoming $133 million a year should provide plenty of money to build better roads.

It denied that the breakdown of the roads is due solely to overloaded trucks.

Brannan Denies His Production Plan Would Make Lazy Farmers

WASHINGTON, June 14—Agriculture Secretary Brannan says there is no truth to charges that the administration's farm plan will make lazy farmers.

During current debate about what the Brannan Plan would and would not do, critics have charged that production payment proposals on perishable crops—as advocated by the Brannan Plan—would encourage some farmers to lay down on the job.

Brannan says that if his plan does anything, as far as farmers' working inclinations are concerned, it will encourage them to better production and marketing efficiency.

Production payments would be computed on the national average of what farmers got in any one season on the market. He explains it this way:

 If the price differential between the parity level and the average market price of potatoes, for example, is 20 cents—all farmers conforming to the law would get 20 cents, no matter at what price they sold potatoes below the parity level.

The efficient farmer will try to sell his potatoes at the highest price he can get on the market. If he sells them at an average of $1 a hundred pounds, he would get the 20-cent production payment per hundred for those he had to sell under parity—if parity was set at more than $1.

The farmer who sells nothing but inferior potatoes, or doesn't give a hoot at what price he sells, might get, say, an average of 60 cents a hundred. He also would get 20 cents a hundred in production payment.

Thus the efficient farmer would make a total of $1.20 on his potatoes, while the "lazy" farmer would get a total of only 80 cents.

Higher Scrap Prices Hiking Tags On Steel

NEW YORK, June 14—The Magazine Iron Age reported today that more steel companies are joining the premium price parade. It said their hand is being forced by higher costs for scrap, nonferrous metals, fuel oil and other supplies.

As a result, according to the national metalworking weekly, three more firms have raised cold-rolled strip $7 a ton while others increased hot-rolled strip $5 a ton and galvanized pipe $8 a ton.

Iron Age predicted that while this trend will continue in the weeks ahead, there will be no general increase in the base price of steel in the immediate future.

It said that although all major steel producers are gravely concerned over rising costs, none of them is planning to raise prices at this time.

The publication reported that this week's action of the scrap market made steel people hopeful that they will be able to hold the line on steel prices.

It said that reaction from the runaway market of recent weeks finally caused scrap prices to soften in several major consuming centers. As a result, the Iron Age steel scrap composite price dropped $1.34 a ton to $39.58 per gross ton.

Bickering, Selfish Plots Hamper National Cause

KAOSHSUNG, Formosa, June 14—Two major questions about China today are:

Have the Nationalists the strength to defend Formosa?

Have the Nationalists the will to defend Formosa?

On the surface evidence, both questions could be answered affirmatively, but each answer would have to be qualified.

As of today, the Nationalists probably have the strength to repulse a Red invasion attempt, but there is the unknown factor of how much aid the Russians will give the Communists to support an amphibious attack.

The Nationalists also seem to have the will to resist invasion, now that they are left without any further territory into which they can retreat.

But the complete unity, which the Kuomintang has been trying to achieve since 1923, still has not been won.

Generals without armies and politicians without jobs are in Formosa in abundance, struggling and plotting to get back into the picture. Jealousies and conflicting ambitions still stand in the way of national unity.

Premier Chen Cheng, a general renowned for personal honesty and complete loyalty to Chiang Kai-Shek, has purged the military of many leaders that he considered "corrupt."

UNDER HIS leadership, the executive branch of the national government has been streamlined to the point where it now has only 825 employees, and that includes secretaries and office boys.

Chen admits that all his problems have not been solved. He admits past errors. He admits that American military supplies were permitted to fall into Communist hands, but said that will not happen again.

And he said: "Our weaknesses and shortcomings cannot be overcome in a day. But you can see great improvements in all fields since last year."

"Our strength is concentrated on Formosa, now that we have evacuated the Chusan Islands."

"Our troops are sufficient to defend the island."

"Our airforce and navy are stronger now than the Communist airforce and navy, but the Russians may give the Communists enough to counteract our advantage."

"Our task is to regroup and retrain our forces to consolidate our Taiwan position as a base from which we can regain the mainland."

The task of regrouping and retraining the Nationalist army has been entrusted to Lt. Gen. Sun Li-jen, trained by Americans at VMI and a comrade-in-arms with Americans during the fighting against the Japanese in Burma.

Sun is too popular with his troops and too much trusted by the people on Formosa to be able to escape the jealousy and resentment of some of the outwork generals and politicians on the island.

In addition, he is charged with the task of doing something that has not been done in China since the days of Kublai Khan and the Mongol rulers.

HE HAS BEEN told to convert the patchwork army of the Chinese into a unified, single army.

That assignment forces Sun to step on the toes of generals jealous of the ancient prerogatives which permitted them to maintain private armies, loyal to a leader, not a nation.

"I am trying to weld the army into a single force," Sun said, "to serve the National cause and the world cause."

"This is not a Chinese cause alone, but the cause of all the people fighting against Red aggression."

Bingo Operators Facing Action

CLEVELAND, June 14—Two west side bingo parlor operators are to appear before License Commissioner Stanley Nemo tomorrow for violating Cleveland's bingo laws.

City officials have charged the two with giving "free" games, giving away merchandise and exceeding the $500 limit pots.

Cleveland bingo operators are said to be doing a $5 million business each year.

Kiernan Named President Of Saints, Sinners

NEW YORK, June 14—Announcement has been made of the election of Walter Kiernan, INS columnist, as president of the Circus Saints and Sinners, New York's famous fun-making organization of business and professional leaders.

Kiernan, whose "One Man's Opinion" paragraphs are carried in many newspapers including The Circleville Herald, succeeds Harold Hoffman, former governor of New Jersey, who followed the late Mayor James J. Walker in the office.

The Circus Saints and Sinners hold nine luncheon-reviews a year, each one built . . . not too gently . . . around the career of some personage who has volunteered to be the "fall guy."

Top "fall guy" of 1950 was Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, president of the United Nations, but the most fearless "fall guy" was Gen. Harry Vaughan . . . although he commented after his appearance "it wasn't quite as rugged as a Senate investigating committee hearing."

Next season's program will open with Kiernan as "fall guy" by way of his installation as president, with Hoffman presiding.

Reginald Townsend, vice-president of Lennen and Mitchell advertising agency, was elected vice-president of the organization and Hoffman was elected secretary.

The smoke screen for concealing movements of troops and ships was invented in 1923 by Thomas B. Hine.

Federal Probe Of Lustron Chief Seen In Offing

COLUMBUS, June 14—Rumors in Columbus today indicated that top Lustron Corporation officials, including President Carl G. Strandlund, may face a federal investigation.

Lustron attorneys and counsel for three creditors of the prefabricated housing firm will ask a Chicago federal judge today to enjoin the Reconstruction Finance Corp. from selling any company assets.

Judge Philip Sullivan in Chicago yesterday ordered the Lustron firm into involuntary bankruptcy but, in Columbus, Federal Judge Mell G. Underwood confirmed the sale of the plant to the RFC for $6 million.

At the same time, the speculation in Columbus was that the Lustron officials would be investigated by a federal grand jury to determine how the plant used $37.5 million loaned by the RFC.

Among the points expected to be explored were why the plant paid $210,000 to an ex-convict; why certain firm officials got "tips" as high as $750; and why the corporation paid an average of $275,000 a month to a Chicago hauling company even during months when there was little or no freight to ship.

The first New York City directory appeared in 1786 with 846 names.

FISH SUPPORTS

APPARENTLY at the behest of a union of fishermen—laborers, not owners—there has been dropped into the congressional hopper a proposal that the prices of fish be supported as are the prices of farm products, by government purchase of market surplus and loans on storage stocks. The mere mental picture of the government engaged in a project of buying and finding places to store unmarketable fish ought to be enough to cause a few fresh thoughts about the whole price support business. After all, if price supports are right for potatoes, eggs, butter and meats, why not for fish? And if the fish industry should be rescued from market troubles by a price support program, why not the much more troubled coal industry? This could go on and on.

The owners of fishing fleets, as a group, are reported to be opposed to the price support proposal. However they are in favor of higher import duties to cut down imports of fish. Apparently their stand on price supports is one of method rather than principle. The farm program supports prices by absorbing, with government funds, supplies which might depress the market. Tariffs support prices by preventing the entry of foreign supplies at prices which would depress the market; they are an old instrument, intended to shield a local market from foreign competition. Price subsidies, the newer instrument, are intended to shield the market from any competitive influence on prices.

Perhaps the people want shielded markets, but the whole thing needs to be thought out, for we are mixed up. Government policy seeks to support prices with the farm program, and at the same time seeks to liberate prices with the reciprocal trade program. One program is aimed at nullifying the effects on the market of the laws of economics; the other is aimed at reviving them. Which do we want?

One job which no one will envy is that of rehearsal for war, conducted by our soldiers in the Alaskan wilderness. Temperatures of 40 degrees below zero are enough in themselves, though matched in many parts of the northern United States. Add the conditions of life necessitated by the untrodden wilderness, and you have an experience which the soldiers may be proud of having lived through, but extremely reluctant ever to undergo again.

The glad hander who is adept at putting people at ease goes too far when the target of his conversation goes to sleep.

These Days

Judge James P. McGranery, who, in 1945, at the time of the opening of the Amerasia case, was the effective assistant attorney general, has taken the position that the FBI fumbled the ball.

This is a very serious charge to make against J. Edgar Hoover. It means that in time of war, in an espionage case involving the theft of documents of varying importance from several departments of the government, Hoover did not know what he was doing.

Of course, no man is infallible, but past performance would lead to the conclusion that the FBI knows how to prepare a case for a conviction. It is curious that the Department of Justice should denounce its own FBI, for obviously if Hoover, in 1945, in time of war, mishandled a major espionage case, he should have been exposed and dismissed by his superiors, first by Francis Biddle, attorney general of the United States, and his successor, Tom Clark, now a justice of the Supreme Court.

Since they did not dismiss him as a bungler, it must be accepted that, at the time, they approved of his conduct of office. It is only now, when they face the political necessity of justifying their own negligence, that they heap mud on Hoover, who cannot answer back, first because he is a subordinate and secondly, because to prove who is really to blame, he would have to produce the records which the President has forbidden him to produce.

Hoover, I am sure, will find a way of clearing his own reputation and that of the FBI. Perhaps he will do it in some manner similar to the arrest of Harry Gold, which was timed, by accident or design, to keep the home fires burning in the Amerasia case.

So, let us turn to another question. Andrew Roth was a lieutenant in the Navy, working in naval intelligence and acting as a liaison with the State Department. His culpability is attested to by Robert M. Hitchcock, the Department of Justice lawyer who handled the case. Hitchcock said:

"When the arrests were made in the Amerasia offices on June 6 the FBI agents found a copy made on Roth's typewriter of a letter dated March 3, 1943.

"The letter was from William Phillips on a letterhead which read: 'Office of the Personal Representative of the President of the United States, New Delhi, India.' The Western world should take a leaf from the Communist notebook, says James Burnham in his new book, "The Coming Defeat of Communism." We should send agents to Kremlin-ruled countries, and stir up unrest. From what we've heard, once the agents got in the task should be easy, though probably fatal.

Is March unpopular because it is really so blustery? Or is it because people got tired of Winter and expected better things?

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR
JOHN turned to the door as the mill manager ordered him out. "Sorry I bothered you, Culbert. I should have gone to Miss Forester about it, in the first place. I'll do just that, now." He went out into the mill yard as he spoke.

George Culbert followed him. "Just a minute, Streeter!" His face was livid, a sneer curled his lips under the small black mustache. "I forgot my manners! Remember me to your wife—or is she that? Sometimes one wonders!"

For a fraction of a moment John saw the other man through a thick blur. Then his vision cleared, his right arm shot out and his clenched fist struck squarely into the sneering face, a blow that sent Culbert reeling back against the jamb of the door, to which he had to cling to hold himself upright.

"You—you'll hear from this!" But his voice was lost in a shout of derision from the gate. "A pretty job!" Loren Matthews slapped John on the back. "We've been waiting for you to get 'round to it!"

As John went on toward his house he looked at his right hand with sudden anxiety. It'd be too bad if he had hurt it, with Loren Matthews' baby coming in a week or so. But except for a considerable stinging of the knuckles, it appeared to be all right.

He could not remember ever striking a man in retaliation before. He had not known it could give one the exhilaration he was feeling at the moment. He'd got quite a bit more of satisfaction from the interview than he had anticipated.

Marilyn was stirring something in a bowl when he went into the kitchen. She gave him a quick, anxious look and he had a sudden inexplicable desire to put his arms around her and say, "It's all right, Lyn."

But he said, "I have to drive up and see Miss Forester for a minute. Then I'm going to the hospital in Cranford. Why don't you come along with me? We'll pick up some lunch somewhere—make a day of it."

His head spinning, George Culbert examined his face in the mirror over the washbowl in a corner of his office. One cheek was beginning to discolor and to swell, his lips were swelling and one was bleeding, his jaw and nose hurt abominably—he couldn't be certain they were not broken. A string of oaths fell from his sore lips. Not all were directed at John Streeter—he was acutely aware he had been a fool to provoke the man's anger.

In his ears still rang the hoot of laughter that had come from the men standing at the gate. The beater crew. "Til fix them," he muttered.

Any minute now Eliza Forrestal would drive into the yard. He caught up a towel, soaked it in cold water from the tap, held it to his face, muttering his curses.

through it. He was sitting at his desk when she came in. She stopped at sight of him and exclaimed, "Whatever has happened?"

He managed a semblance of a laugh. "You ought to see the other fellow!"

"But who..."

"I had a run-in with one of the men. They're a tougher lot than you think and not above violence, you see."

She came up to the desk, looked at his face with concern. "You should have Doctor Streeter take care of this right away! It may be worse than you think... But, no, he's gone to Cranford to the hospital. He drove up to the house a half-hour ago to tell me that he and Doctor Cook thought Dave Wilson should stay in the hospital for a while. I told him that, of course, he must—until his hand is quite well."

Culbert drew a slightly easier breath. Though he could not imagine why Streeter had not spoken to Eliza of his earlier call on him, it made the situation a little less difficult.

Eliza continued, "You could find Doctor Streeter in the hospital—I could drive you over." "It isn't as serious as that. Anyway, I can't let my assailant think he damaged me any! Now, for the business of the day. I've been figuring out the cut in wages I spoke about the other day. It'll save enough to carry us along until things pick up."

Eliza interrupted him. "Do we have to decide about it now?"

He looked at her in some surprise, for she spoke a little wearily and he took it as meaning that she was beginning to find the affairs of the mill too much for her. But it offered exactly the moment he had been waiting for. "As a matter of fact, we don't. For this reason—I've heard from Bendley, himself—Morris, the big shot of the Mills. He wants to come over here on Thursday with some others—come to us, mind you! You can bet I said, 'Come along! I took the liberty to tell them to drive up to your house. It'd be a rather more impressive setting than this two-by-four office of yours in the other shed. Thursday, three o'clock. Okay?"

Eliza nodded her head. He continued, "Looks like they're ready to talk in figures—and fast. Are you willing to let me do the talking for our side of it?"

"You'll know more about it than I," said Eliza again with what seemed to the manager almost indifference. She got up from her chair. "I'm going to drive to Cranford—I want to buy some music. You're certain you will not let me take you to the hospital to have something done for your face?"

"Quite certain and thanks, my dear, for your concern. I'll try a slab of beefsteak on it—just that what you do? Run along, now. Some other time and soon we'll take a day off and go somewhere together." He got up from his desk.

chair, put his hand on her shoulder. "Maybe we'll have a cause to celebrate, after Thursday."

He sat down again the instant she was gone, his hand going to his aching jaw. It had taken a heroic effort to hold on to himself before her, even to talk. But he considered he had done both very well. She had seemed different this morning—to have lost that confidence in herself that had annoyed him of late, made him watch his step. Only half of her mind had appeared to be taking in what he was saying, and such divided attention had played into his hands. He smiled in satisfaction but it made his lip begin to bleed again and he went to the washbowl to put the wet cold towel to it.

He'd see a doctor, all right, but he'd see Doctor Streeter or Cook. He would drive to Edgeborough. But before he went he'd attend to the little matter of firing the whole beater crew, for good and all. They could laugh, then, the other side of their faces! Post it on the bulletin board outside of the digester shed so that every man in the mill would read it. He sat down again at his desk, one hand holding the towel to his mouth.

Eliza and Hespeth were watering the petunias by the kitchen door when they heard the bell begin to ring down in the valley.

"From the Meeting House!" said Hespeth, surprise in her voice. "I haven't heard of any goings on, there!"

To Eliza the deep notes echoing up and down the valley had a somber sound. She felt a little inexplicable shiver go over her as she listened.

"Isn't it, Hespeth?" observed Hespeth. "Not the way it's ringing! Jesse Willis always rings the bell and he's one pull for fire and another for death."

"Perhaps it's a wedding," put in Eliza. "Did you water these at this end, Hespeth?"

But Hespeth was not to be distracted. She began to untie her apron. "Seems like it's calling to everybody. I'm going along down." The bell pealed again, echoed and re-echoed. Eliza followed Hespeth into the kitchen. "Til drive down, Hespeth."

They found the Meeting House full of men and women when they arrived there. There was left only a little space on a bench near the door and they squeezed into it. Hespeth nodded to the women who sat near them but Eliza sent her glance over the heads in front of her. Looking, she knew, for Chris Cameron...

She had not caught so much as a glimpse of him since she had left him on the rock the Sunday before. Driving to the mill and away from it she watched for him but, she told herself, and believed, it was to avoid an encounter with him. Just as now, if she saw him sitting on one of the benches in front of her, she would slip out and wait for Hespeth in the car.

In the early days of the blitz, Winston Churchill motored hurriedly to Canterbury to see that proper precautions were taken for the protection of the famous cathedral there. Later he explained to the Archbishop, "We have bolstered the edifice and approaches with sandbags to spare. Every device known to man has been applied. No matter how many close hits the Nazis may make, I feel sure the Cathedral will survive."

"Ah, yes, close hits," said the Archbishop gloomily, "but what if they score a direct hit upon us?" "In that event," decided Churchill, with some asperity, "you will have to regard it, my dear Archbishop, as a summons."

Common Causes of Jaundice

By HERMAN M. DUNDESEN, M.D.

JAUNDICE is a condition in which there is a greenish-yellow discoloration of the skin due to a collection of bile pigments, or coloring, in the tissues. The flooding of the system with bile may come about in two ways. In the first, the cells of the liver are so damaged by disease or poisoning that they are unable to collect and excrete bile. In the second, bile passageways may become obstructed, preventing normal flow of bile into the intestines and leaving it to be absorbed by the blood.

One of the most common causes of jaundice—infectious hepatitis—belongs to the first type, in which liver cells are injured by infection. Resulting symptoms include fatigue, a feeling of sickness, fever, nausea, discomfort in the upper part of the abdomen, and vomiting. Frequently, a cold or an attack of influenza precedes the onset of jaundice by about two weeks, thus giving evidence of the source of the liver infection.

Number of Reasons

Obstruction to the bile passages may occur for a number of reasons. A common one is a cancer of the pancreas, a gland in the abdomen which supplies digestive secretions as well as insulin needed for the use of sugar by the body. The jaundice may occur before other symptoms are noted. However, sooner or later pain develops. This pain is dull and boring, and is located in the upper part of the abdomen. Other possible symptoms are weakness and loss of appetite.

Other causes of jaundice are cancer of the bile duct, a stone in the common bile duct which leads from the gall bladder and the liver to the bowel, and cancer of the liver.

Repeated Attacks When jaundice is due to a stone in the common bile duct, there is usually a history of gallbladder disease, with repeated attacks of pain in the right, upper part of the abdomen, together with sickness at the stomach and vomiting.

There is also some tenderness on the right side. In these patients, operation for the removal of the stone is necessary. Jaundice may also occur in a disorder known as cirrhosis of the liver. However, it does not develop until this condition has been present for some time. When jaundice develops, there is always need for thorough study to determine its source before effective treatment can be carried out.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A Reader: What is the cause of blackheads?

Answer: Blackheads are due to acne. The exact cause of acne or pimples is not known, although it is likely that the condition is due, in part, to an increased activity of the skin glands.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Mel Heimer

NEW YORK—It is likely that on this green earth there are a few hundred citizens who, if they are asked about New York City, will reply, "Oh—you mean the town with the pigeons?"

I don't know—maybe I'm groping a little there. But it is true that we have more pigeons in our five boroughs than there are Irishmen in Dublin, to swipe an old comparison.

Up in the Bronx and out in Brooklyn, there isn't a night goes by that you can't see some pigeon-fancier up on his apartment roof, waving the beards around in the sky with that tennis racket or whatever it is they use to make them go in circles.

But the bulk of our pigeons are wild. They wear no man's coop. They haunt the highways and byways of Manhattan from morning to night, and causing more arguments pro and con than any bird on earth. "Wild" is the wrong word, I guess. The New York pigeon, while he belongs to no one, is exceptionally phlegmatic, self-assured and insolent. He gets under everyone's feet and, when they don't get out of his way, he glares at them or gets revenge on them in other, interesting fashions.

He loafs in the roads, spitting in the eyes of taxicab drivers, and he spends his mornings plucking morosely at the lawn around St. Patrick's cathedral.

He has a number of benefactors who feed him at certain oases around the city, from bags full of bread crumbs, and it is quite possible that he considers them suckers. The pigeon in New York is so—oh, so typically New York.

His patron saint, a kindly man who probably has never been in so much of a hurry that fighting his way through a sidewalk full of pigeons was a problem, is Angelo Romano, who runs a bird and rabbit store up in the East Eighties.

Canaries are Angelo's big stock in trade, but in the 30 years that he has been running his business, he has come to be known as the man who runs the haven for crippled birds.

New Yorkers from all walks of life who know about Angelo come to him regularly with hurt birds that they find on the city streets. And he patches them up until they're well, after which he sets them free.

THE PIGEON IS AN INDIVIDUAL, to be sure, but charm is not one of his strong points, so you can see that Mr. Romano is kinder than most citizens. When a bird lover comes to him with a pigeon that's injured, he'll accept small amounts to help him feed and care for the pigeon, but if the bird lover hasn't any money, he'll take it anyway.

Usually he has about 40 pigeons tucked away in cages in the rear of his store. A pigeon is a pigeon, even when he's not in the grass, alas, but Angelo considers them all different, all of various personalities. His son, Sam, helps him out, and between the two of them, they've done more to set back the cause of the anti-pigeon men in New York than bird seed.

More than a dozen of the pigeons in his shop are permanent boarders, for one reason or another. There's a dark purple one, for instance, that was brought in a decade ago by a lawyer and has stayed on ever since—because he's blind.

Another had his feet (feet?) frozen, and although Angelo brought him out of the miseries by rubbing the feet with alcohol, they're all twisted now and he'd be hard put to go out and make himself a living in the big leagues. Because New York pigeons are big-leaguers—fast, tough, and skilled in the art of stealing food from each other.

A ONETIME FACTORY WORKER who lost his left hand in a hunting accident, Angelo's an Italian who's lived in America for 40 years. He started his shop by breeding a male and female canary who blessed him with 18 children in a year.

Angelo has managed, incidentally, to bring up seven children of his own. To carry a few coals to Newcastle, he sings to his canaries all day long "to keep them company."

I am a man who is an oddity—a man who never has made up his mind about pigeons. I kick idly at them, but that's just as a rebellious gesture toward pigeon-lovers who drool over them too childishly.

It's pretty hard to work up a dislike of any creature that runs or walks or breathes, even a rat, but the pigeon as presented to us here in New York is a greedy and unsanitary soul who makes affection kind of tough.

Maybe out in your neighborhood, they're more charming. If so, send us a few. Charm is something our pigeons ain't got.

FISH SUPPORTS

APPARENTLY at the behest of a union of fishermen—laborers, not owners—there has been dropped into the congressional hopper a proposal that the prices of fish be supported as are the prices of farm products, by government purchase of market surplus and loans on storage stocks. The mere mental picture of the government engaged in a project of buying and finding places to store unmarketable fish ought to be enough to cause a few fresh thoughts about the whole price support business. After all, if price supports are right for potatoes, eggs, butter and meats, why not for fish? And if the fish industry should be rescued from market troubles by a price support program, why not the much more troubled coal industry? This could go on and on.

The owners of fishing fleets, as a group, are reported to be opposed to the price support proposal. However they are in favor of higher import duties to cut down imports of fish. Apparently their stand on price supports is one of method rather than principle. The farm program supports prices by absorbing, with government funds, supplies which might depress the market. Tariffs support prices by preventing the entry of foreign supplies at prices which would depress the market; they are an old instrument, intended to shield a local market from foreign competition. Price subsidies, the newer instrument, are intended to shield the market from any competitive influence on prices.

Perhaps the people want shielded markets, but the whole thing needs to be thought out, for we are mixed up. Government policy seeks to support prices with the farm program, and at the same time seeks to liberate prices with the reciprocal trade program. One program is aimed at nullifying the effects on the market of the laws of economics; the other is aimed at reviving them. Which do we want?

One job which no one will envy is that of rehearsal for war, conducted by our soldiers in the Alaskan wilderness. Temperatures of 40 degrees below zero are enough in themselves, though matched in many parts of the northern United States. Add the conditions of life necessitated by the untrodden wilderness, and you have an experience which the soldiers may be proud of having lived through, but extremely reluctant ever to undergo again.

The glad hander who is adept at putting people at ease goes too far when the target of his conversation goes to sleep.

These Days

Judge James P. McGranery, who, in 1945, at the time of the opening of the Amerasia case, was the effective assistant attorney general, has taken the position that the FBI fumbled the ball.

This is a very serious charge to make against J. Edgar Hoover. It means that in time of war, in an espionage case involving the theft of documents of varying importance from several departments of the government, Hoover did not know what he was doing.

Of course, no man is infallible, but past performance would lead to the conclusion that the FBI knows how to prepare a case for a conviction. It is curious that the Department of Justice should denounce its own FBI, for obviously if Hoover, in 1945, in time of war, mishandled a major espionage case, he should have been exposed and dismissed by his superiors, first by Francis Biddle, attorney general of the United States, and his successor, Tom Clark, now a justice of the Supreme Court.

Since they did not dismiss him as a bungler, it must be accepted that, at the time, they approved of his conduct of office. It is only now, when they face the political necessity of justifying their own negligence, that they heap mud on Hoover, who cannot answer back, first because he is a subordinate and secondly, because to prove who is really to blame, he would have to produce the records which the President has forbidden him to produce.

Hoover, I am sure, will find a way of clearing his own reputation and that of the FBI. Perhaps he will do it in some manner similar to the arrest of Harry Gold, which was timed, by accident or design, to keep the home fires burning in the Amerasia case.

So, let us turn to another question. Andrew Roth was a lieutenant in the Navy, working in naval intelligence and acting as a liaison with the State Department. His culpability is attested to by Robert M. Hitchcock, the Department of Justice lawyer who handled the case. Hitchcock said:

"When the arrests were made in the Amerasia offices on June 6 the FBI agents found a copy made on Roth's typewriter of a letter dated March 3, 1943.

"The letter was from William Phillips on a letterhead which read: 'Office of the Personal Representative of the President of the United States, New Delhi, India.' It was addressed to the secretary of state and it enclosed a copy of a letter of the same date to President Roosevelt. The subject was the conflicting British and Indian points of view and the possibility of Indian freedom after the war, and it suggested a solution to the then present impasse as 'a step in furthering the ideals of the Atlantic Charter.'

He smiled in satisfaction but it made his lip begin to bleed again and he went to the washbowl to put the wet cold towel to it.

He'd see a doctor, all right, but it wouldn't be Streeter or Cook. He would drive to Edgeborough. But before he went he'd attend to the little matter of firing the whole beater crew, for good and all. They could laugh, then, the other side of their faces! Post it on the bulletin board outside of the digester shed so that every man in the mill would read it. He sat down again at his desk, one hand holding the towel to his mouth.

Eliza and Hespeth were watering the petunias by the kitchen door when they heard the bell begin to ring down in the valley. "From the Meeting House!" said Hespeth, surprise in her voice. "I haven't heard of any goings on, there!"

To Eliza the deep notes echoing up and down the valley had a somber sound. She felt a little inexplicable shiver go over her as she listened.

"Isn't it?" observed Hespeth. "Not the way it's ringing! Jesse Willis always rings the bell and he's one pull for fire and another for death."

"Perhaps it's a wedding," put in Eliza. "Did you water these at this end, Hespeth?"

But Hespeth was not to be distracted. She began to untie her apron. "Seems like it's calling to everybody. I'm going along down."

The bell pealed again, echoed and re-echoed. Eliza followed Hespeth into the kitchen. "I'll drive down, Hespeth."

They found the Meeting House full of men and women when they arrived there. There was left only a little space on a bench near the door and they squeezed into it. Hespeth nodded to the women who sat near them but Eliza sent her glance over the heads in front of her. Looking, she knew, for Chris Cameron...

She had not caught so much as a glimpse of him since she had left him on the rock the Sunday before. Driving to the mill and away from it she watched for him but, she told herself, and believed, it was to avoid an encounter with him. Just as now, if she saw him sitting on one of the benches in front of her, she would slip out and wait for Hespeth in the car.

In the early days of the blitz, Winston Churchill motored hurriedly to Canterbury to see that proper precautions were taken for the protection of the famous cathedral there. Later he explained to the Archbishop, "We have bolstered the edifice and approaches with sandbags to spare. Every device known to man has been applied. No matter how many close hits the Nazis may make, I feel sure the Cathedral will survive."

"Ah, yes, close hits," said the Archbishop gloomily, "but what if they score a direct hit upon us?" "In that event," decided Churchill, with some asperity, "you will have to regard it, my dear Archbishop, as a summons."

James Thurber was boasting of his native Ohio at a dinner given by the Columbia Jester. "If Ohio is such a wonderful state," chided Howard Dietz, "why do so many of its valiant sons leave it and come to New York?" "In Ohio," Thurber pointed out loftily, "the competition is too tough."

ONE MAN'S OPINION

The mailman who piled 3,000 letters in his closet was only trying to help the postmaster general cut down on service, but he didn't get his efficiency pin yet.

He didn't just pile up mail indiscriminately. All bills and circulars got through on time.

Congress wants the twice-a-day delivery restored. The boys aren't accustomed to getting all the beefs in one mail after lunch.

They feel that a man who has had a light breakfast can stand opening the first mail while he has lunch in prospect. After what he has read in the morning, nothing can disturb him in the afternoon.

So far, no estimate has been made of the amount of money saved, but there is quite a bit of mail on hand... maybe enough to last right through June if no one mailed another letter.

Common Causes of Jaundice

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

JAUNDICE is a condition in which there is a greenish-yellow discoloration of the skin due to a collection of bile pigments, or coloring, in the tissues. The flooding of the system with bile may come about in two ways. In the first, the cells of the liver are so damaged by disease or poisoning that they are unable to collect and excrete bile. In the second, bile passageways may become obstructed, preventing normal flow of bile into the intestines and leaving it to be absorbed by the blood.

One of the most common causes of jaundice—infectious hepatitis—belongs to the first type, in which liver cells are injured by infection. Resulting symptoms include fatigue, a feeling of sickness, fever, nausea, discomfort in the upper part of the abdomen, and vomiting. Frequently, a cold or an attack of influenza precedes the onset of jaundice by about two weeks, thus giving evidence of the source of the liver infection.

Number of Reasons
Obstruction to the bile passages may occur for a number of reasons. A common one is a cancer of the pancreas, a gland in the abdomen which supplies digestive secretions as well as insulin needed for the use of sugar by the body. The jaundice may occur before other symptoms are noted. However, sooner or later pain develops. This pain is dull and boring, and is located in the upper part of the abdomen. Other possible symptoms are weakness and loss of appetite.

Other causes of jaundice are cancer of the bile duct, a stone in the common bile duct which leads from the gall bladder and the liver to the bowel, and cancer of the liver.

Repeated Attacks
When jaundice is due to a stone in the common bile duct, there is usually a history of gallbladder disease, with repeated attacks of pain in the right, upper part of the abdomen, together with sickness at the stomach and vomiting. There is also some tenderness on the right side. In these patients, operation for the removal of the stone is necessary.

Jaundice may also occur in a disorder known as cirrhosis of the liver. However, it does not develop until this condition has been present for some time.

When jaundice develops, there is always need for thorough study to determine its source before effective treatment can be carried out.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A Reader: What is the cause of blackheads?

Answer: Blackheads are due to acne. The exact cause of acne or pimples is not known, although it is likely that the condition is due, in part, to an increased activity of the skin glands.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Mel Heimer

NEW YORK—It is likely that on this green earth there are a few hundred citizens who, if they are asked about New York City, will reply, "Oh—you mean the town with the pigeons?" I don't know—maybe I'm groping a little there. But it is true that we have more pigeons in our five boroughs than there are Irishmen in Dublin, to swipe an old comparison.

Up in the Bronx and out in Brooklyn, there isn't a night goes by that you can't see some pigeon-fancier up on his apartment roof, waving the beasts around in the sky with that tennis racket or whatever it is they use to make them go in circles.

But the bulk of our pigeons are wild. They wear no man's coop. They haunt the highways and byways of Manhattan from morning to night, and causing more arguments pro and con than any bird on earth. "Wild" is the wrong word, I guess. The New York pigeon, while he belongs to no one, is exceptionally phlegmatic, self-assured and insolent. He gets under everyone's feet and, when they don't get out of his way, he glares at them or gets revenge on them in other, interesting fashions.

He loafs in the roads, spitting in the eyes of taxicab drivers, and he spends his mornings plucking morosely at the lawn around St. Patrick's cathedral.

He has a number of benefactors who feed him at certain places around the city, from bags full of bread crumbs, and it is quite possible that he considers them suckers. The pigeon in New York is so—oh, so typically New York.

His patron saint, a kindly man who probably has never been in so much of a hurry that fighting his way through a sidewalk full of pigeons was a problem, is Angelo Romano, who runs a bird and rabbit store up in the East Eighties.

Canaries are Angelo's big stock in trade, but in the 30 years that he has been running his business, he has come to be known as the man who runs the haven for crippled birds.

New Yorkers from all walks of life who know about Angelo come to him regularly with hurt birds that they find on the city streets. And he patches them up until they're well, after which he sets them free.

THE PIGEON IS AN INDIVIDUAL, to be sure, but charm is not one of his strong points, so you can see that Mr. Romano is kinder than most citizens. When a bird lover comes to him with a pigeon that's injured, he'll accept small amounts to help him feed and care for the pigeon, but if the bird lover hasn't any money, he'll take it anyway.

Usually he has about 40 pigeons tucked away in cages in the rear of his store. A pigeon is a pigeon, even when he's not in the grass, alas, but Angelo considers them all different, all of various personalities. His son, Sam, helps him out, and between the two of them, they've done more to set back the cause of the anti-pigeon men in New York than bird seed.

More than a dozen of the pigeons in his shop are permanent hoarders, for one reason or another. There's a dark purple one, for instance, that was brought in a decade ago by a lawyer and has stayed on ever since—because he's blind.

Another had his feet (feet?) frozen, and although Angelo brought him out of the misery by rubbing the feet with alcohol, they're all twisted now and he'd be hard put to go out and make himself a living in the big leagues. Because New York pigeons are big-leaguers—fast, rough, tough and skilled in the art of stealing food from each other.

A ONETIME FACTORY WORKER who lost his left hand in a hunting accident, Angelo's an Italian who's lived in America for 40 years. He started his shop by breeding a male and female canary who blessed him with 18 children in a year.

Angelo has managed, incidentally, to bring up seven children of his own. To carry a few coals to Newcastle, he sings to his canaries all day long "to keep them company."

I am a man who is an oddity—a man who never has made up his mind about pigeons. I kick idly at them, but that's just as a rebellious gesture toward pigeon-lovers who drool over them too childishly.

It's pretty hard to work up a dislike of any creature that runs or walks or breathes, even a rat, but the pigeon as presented to us here in New York is a greedy and unsanitary soul who makes affection kind of tough.

Maybe out in your neighborhood, they're more charming. If so, send us a few. Charm is something our pigeons ain't got.

WASHINGTON REPORT

By SENATOR ROBERT A. TAFT

President Truman and Secretary Acheson have indicated their desire to reinstate a bipartisan foreign policy. In the recent statement of Principles and Objectives adopted by the Republican members of the House of Representatives and the Republican members of the Senate and concurred in by the members of the Republican National Committee, it was said:

We favor consultation between the Executive and Members of both major parties in the Legislative Branch of Government in the initiation and development of a united American Foreign Policy."

Foreign policy under our Constitution is committed primarily to the President of the United States. At least, he must initiate such policy and carry on all negotiations with foreign nations. But many of these policies must be submitted to Congress or the Senate for confirmation.

If the President desires to consult with responsible Republican leaders of the Republican party in Congress, I know that he or his representatives will always be welcome. But if the party is to be in any way responsible for foreign policy, surely these leaders must be consulted before those policies are adopted and must be given an opportunity to consult with the other Republican senators and to participate in the formation of policy.

NO POLICY CAN become bipartisan by the appointment of Republicans to executive office, although I believe that recent appointments are intended as a move toward the establishment of closer relations with the elected Republicans in Congress.

In consultation on foreign policy, Republicans, of course, must reserve the right to criticize, to suggest changes, and in the last analysis to reject if agreement cannot be reached. I feel there are some phases of foreign policy on which, after consultation, a consensus of opinion probably could be reached, but I know of other phases also where differences will continue to exist.

I doubt the possibility of any complete bipartisan foreign policy covering all areas of foreign policy—in fact, there never has been such a policy. Senator Vandenberg was never consulted about Chinese or other Far Eastern policy and seldom consulted regarding Latin America until he went to Rio.

The Republican party, of course, was never consulted

Industry Must Invest Heavily

AKRON, June 14—John L. Collier, president of the B. F. Goodrich Co., said last night that American industry will have to invest $200 billion during the next 10 years if the United States is to continue its present standard of living.

Speaking at commencement exercises at the University of Akron, Collier added that this figure is almost as much as was invested in the last 30 years.

The only way this can be done, said the rubber company executive, is by providing every American worker with more effective tools so that this country can produce and distribute, in vastly increased volume, the goods and services required by the American people.

After middle age the eyes begin to change in their structure. Most people get far-sighted after 45.

with regard to the secret agreements at Teheran and Yalta, subsequently confirmed at Potsdam, which have created new injustices and new dangers throughout the world. Many of us have differed fundamentally with the policy in China and with some of the foreign economic proposals since the war.

Only recently, the Secretary of State sent to Congress the charter of the International Trade Organization (ITO) without any prior consultation of any kind with the Republican senators who had given long study to the subject. Republican senators were not consulted about the Point Four project or the further reduction in tariffs proposed in September.

TO THE ADMINISTRATION and its partisans in the press, bipartisan foreign policy seems to mean any administration foreign policy to which the adherence of some individual Republican is obtained.

Any Republican who differs with that policy is at once accused of isolationism and sabotage of this imaginary bipartisan policy. Whether the President chooses to consult Republicans or not, I am sure that the Republican party will co-operate with the State Department in the support of those policies directed toward the attainment of peace, subject always to the overriding necessity of maintaining the freedom and security of the people of the United States.

I have avoided and as far as possible will continue to avoid carping criticism of current foreign policy.

I cannot, however, carry this so far as to acquiesce even in current policies which violate fundamental principles I consider necessary for the peace and security of our people. Nor do I see why any bipartisan foreign policy should interfere with proper and legitimate criticism of past foreign policy, the dangerous results of which have now been made apparent.

Arlington Folks Say '3 Rs' All Pupils Need

COLUMBUS, June 14—Seventy parents in Upper Arlington held their ground today for more emphasis on the "three Rs" of school work and less "social studies, global attitudes, human relations, etc."

The signers of a petition of protest backed up their signatures by appearing at the meeting of the school board last night. Dr. B. E. Jacoby read the three and a half-page protest to the board.

The petitioners demanded that the schools pay more attention to the "simple virtues—the teaching of basic subjects, respect for authority, consideration of others, modesty and pride in individual initiative."

The parents attacked what they called "an inadequate disciplinary policy" which "increased lack of respect by the children for adults, school personnel and property of others; rudeness and tardiness."

STATING flatly that "the primary purpose of any public school system is to teach reading, writing, spelling, English, mathematics, history, civics, geography and elementary science," the parents declared there was too much "de-emphasis" of grading.

As for courses in courtship and marriage, the parents claimed it should be based on individual parental permission. Urging restrictions on extra-curricular activities sponsored by the school, the parents demanded a "return to academic activities."

Oil Imports Bring Protest

CLEVELAND, June 14—An official of a Pennsylvania coal company has charged that major petroleum producers have been guilty of "irresponsible activity contrary to the public interest" in stepping up imports of foreign crude oil.

Dr. Charles J. Potter, president of the Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal Co. of Indiana, Pa., placed the blame for a part of the coal industry's ailments on some of the nation's largest oil companies.

Speaking before the closing session of the National Association of Purchasing Agents in Cleveland, Dr. Potter said that such action "is well calculated to bring on governmental intervention."

Best Chickens Are Awarded

COLUMBUS, June 14—Harvey Wilford of Elyria has the best chickens in Ohio.

Wilford has a three-foot gold trophy to prove that his plump broilers won the Chicken-Of-Tomorrow contest at Ohio State university yesterday.

Wilford's White Cornish chickens took first place, weighing an average of 4.42 pounds. His White Cornish-White Rock cross birds were second placers.

Eleven-year-old James E. Winkler of Wooster won first place honors in the junior division. He had Cornish-White Rocks averaging 4.48 pounds.

By BILLY ROSE

As an old blab merchant, I seldom pay much attention to the other fellow's speeches, and when I do it's generally to take umbrage rather than notice. Today, however, I'd like to turn coat and tables on myself and do some hefty hollering about a speech on the future of television recently delivered by Dr. Millard Faught, an economist, at the University Club of Chicago.

I happened to pop-eye a copy of it the other day, and while I haven't the space to give you the whole 4,000 words, here's a bit of the cream off the top.

To begin with, Dr. Faught axoms that TV can be used for a lot of things besides selling eye-wash, mouthwash and hogwash, and insists that its full potentialities will never be realized if we allow it to be taken over lock, stock and antenna by the hucksters. In his opinion, the new dingus can do an unprecedented job for us in a dozen esthetic fields providing, of course, that a method can be devised whereby someone besides the advertiser foots part of the bill.

The gimmick he suggests is a television box office operating on a pay-as-you-see-it basis, and the one he specifically mentions in his speech-Phonevision-is due to be tested in Chicago this fall with the blessings of the FCC.

LEAVING ELECTRONIC doubletalk out of it, Phonevision, which was recently demonstrated for me, is simply this: a system whereby 99 percent of an image is telecast free of charge, but shows up on the home screen as so much hash. To unscramble the picture, one picks up the phone and asks the operator to pipe in the missing 1 per cent through a gadget on his set hooked up to his telephone line. At the end of the month, the charge for this service is included in his phone bill, and the gross take divided between the television station, the creator of the program, and the phone company.

According to Dr. Faught, Phonevision—or some equivalent device—will make it possible to collect millions of dollars in a single evening for, let us say, the Red Cross by putting on one nationwide benefit video show. It will enable our sick-unto-dearth Hollywood studios to quintuple their audiences and double their grosses, and also make possible ten-million-dollar gates for championship fights and World Series games. But, opines the good doctor, its most eye-bugging impact will be on education.

By bringing the classroom into the home, it will be possible for 100,000 students simultaneously to take the same beginners' course in Spanish, or child care, or interior decorating, whereas the average class on campus today consists of from 25 to 50 students.

The pay-as-you-see revenue from these home extension courses would provide the monies for new university buildings, laboratories, scholarships and teachers' salaries, and once and for all our colleges could stop passing the hat. Education, the doc goes on to say, is our best bet to stand off totalitarianism, despite which it's probably the most obsoletely merchandized commodity in our society.

The economist stresses that he has no quarrel with the advertisers, but maintains that if they're the only source of revenue, TV is a chance to wind up the same sort of cultural pigmy that radio is.

The living room, he argues, is probably the room farthest removed from the marketplace, and if Joe Jones and his missus want something in it beside cornflake and Cuticura commercials, they'll have to contribute the pennies to make it possible. The Government could probably be pressured into doing it for them, but who with an IQ above zero, asks Dr. Faught, wants political appointees messing with our educational processes and cultural preferences?

I particularly like the last line of his speech: "Never in the history of the communicative arts

Elinor Williams' Teen Tips

It's a sad and sorry plight when 'teeners and parents don't agree on social life and dates. Sometimes high schoolers expect too much bright lights and not enough book-work. But, in some cases, parents set an age for dates (18, for instance) that blights the high school years, regardless of modern customs and their daughter's promise to come home on time.

"We are two 16-year-old girls and we are having trouble persuading our parents that we are roll during the quarter was $1,645,000,000.

old enough for dates and entertaining boys in our homes. Nearly all our friends have dates," write the two girls, "and it makes us feel different from others our age. How can we persuade our parents to let us have dates? We are not even permitted to entertain boys in our homes."

Ans.—Why not talk this over with your parents once more, explaining that high school dances, club affairs, games, etc., are planned for all students beginning at freshman age, which certainly includes you. That you are missing the normal, wholesome beginning of social and community life by not being allowed to enjoy school affairs?

Tell them that most parents agree on 15 for early-evening dates and that you should be given an opportunity to prove that you can be trusted to behave properly when you have dates. It's your right to be able to invite friends to your home; otherwise it's not a home or even a place to live, but just a place to exist.

Suggest to your mother that you invite a boy—or another girl and two boys—to your home so she can meet them. Then when she knows them better, she'll okay movie dates. Remind her that there was less juvenile delinquency when social life centered in homes instead of undesirable public places. Besides, how will you know or learn how to behave on dates if you never have any? Just being older won't do it.

By BILLY ROSE

As an old blab merchant, I seldom pay much attention to the other fellow's speeches, and when I do it's generally to take umbrage rather than notice. Today, however, I'd like to turn coat and tables on myself and do some hefty hollering about a speech on the future of television recently delivered by Dr. Millard Faught, an economist, at the University Club of Chicago.

I happened to pop-eye a copy of it the other day, and while I haven't the space to give you the whole 4,000 words, here's a bit of the cream off the top.

To begin with, Dr. Faught axoms that TV can be used for a lot of things besides selling eyewash, mouthwash and hogwash, and insists that its full potentialities will never be realized if we allow it to be taken over lock, stock and antenna by the hucksters. In his opinion, the new dingdus can do an unprecedented job for us in a dozen esthetic fields providing, of course, that a method can be devised whereby someone besides the advertiser foots part of the bill.

The gimmick he suggests is a television box office operating on a pay-as-you-see-it basis, and the one he specifically mentions in his speech-Phonevision—is due to be tested in Chicago this fall with the blessings of the FCC.

LEAVING ELECTRONIC doubletalk out of it, Phonevision, which was recently demonstrated for me, is simply this: a system whereby 99 percent of an image is telecast free of charge, but shows up on the home screen as so much hash. To unscramble the picture, one picks up the phone and asks the operator to pipe in the missing 1 per cent through a gadget on his set hooked up to his telephone line. At the end of the month, the charge for this service is included in his phone bill, and the gross take divided between the television station, the creator of the program, and the phone company.

According to Dr. Faught, Phonevision—or some equivalent device—will make it possible to collect millions of dollars in a single evening for, let us say, the Red Cross by putting on one nationwide benefit video show. It will enable our sick-unto-death Hollywood studios to quintuple their audiences and double their grosses, and also make possible ten-million-dollar gates for championship fights and World Series games. But, opines the good doctor, its most eye-bugging impact will be on education.

By bringing the classroom into the home, it will be possible for 100,000 students simultaneously to take the same beginners' course in Spanish, or child care, or interior decorating, whereas the average class on campus today consists of from 25 to 50 students.

The pay-as-you-see revenue from these home extension courses would provide the monies for new university buildings, laboratories, scholarships and teachers' salaries, and once and for all our colleges could stop passing the hat. Education, the doc goes on to say, is our best bet to stand off totalitarianism, despite which it's probably the most obsoletely merchandized commodity in our society.

The economist stresses that he has no quarrel with the advertisers, but maintains that if they're the only source of revenue, TV is a cinch to wind up the same sort of cultural pigmy that radio is.

The living room, he argues, is probably the room farthest removed from the marketplace, and if Joe Jones and his missus want something in it beside cornflake and Cuticura commercials, they'll have to contribute the pennies to make it possible. The Government could probably be pressured into doing it for them, but who with an IQ above zero, asks Dr. Faught, wants political appointees messing with our educational processes and cultural preferences?

I particularly like the last line of his speech: "Never in the history of the communicative arts

Elinor Williams' Teen Tips

It's a sad and sorry plight when 'teeners and parents don't agree on social life and dates. Sometimes high schoolers expect too much bright lights and not enough book-work. But, in some cases, parents set an age for dates (18, for instance) that blights the high school years, regardless of modern customs and their daughter's promise to come home on time.

"We are two 16-year-old girls and we are having trouble persuading our parents that we are roll during the quarter was $1,645,000,000.

old enough for dates and entertaining boys in our homes. Nearly all our friends have dates," write the two girls, "and it makes us feel different from others our age. How can we persuade our parents to let us have dates? We are not even permitted to entertain boys in our homes."

Ans.—Why not talk this over with your parents once more, explaining that high school dances, club affairs, games, etc., are planned for all students beginning at freshman age, which certainly includes you. That you are missing the normal, wholesome beginning of social and community life by not being allowed to enjoy school affairs?

Tell them that most parents agree on 15 for early-evening dates and that you should be given an opportunity to prove that you can be trusted to behave properly when you have dates. It's your right to be able to invite friends to your home; otherwise it's not a home or even a place to live, but just a place to exist.

Suggest to your mother that you invite a boy—or another girl and two boys—to your home so she can meet them. Then when she knows them better, she'll okay movie dates. Remind her that there was less juvenile delinquency when social life centered in homes instead of undesirable public places. Besides, how will you know or learn how to behave on dates if you never have any? Just being older won't do it.

HOW PARTICULAR ARE YOU ABOUT YOUR CLOTHES
Come in and see our wide selection of rich fabrics and attractive styles.
GEORGE W. LITTLETON
TERMITES
Cause damage in excess of fifty million dollars annually for REPAIRS alone. These destructive pests work in secret and may be destroying your property NOW. Have it inspected by an expert and be sure. There is no charge for the inspection, and if your property is not infested they will tell you so. If termites are present you will be SHOWN and a fair price quoted for a treatment which is guaranteed for TEN YEARS.
Many irresponsible amateurs—self-styled "exterminators" offer "part time" entomologists offer fantastic "guarantees" and bargain prices, but you owe it to yourself to be SURE you are securing the services of a thoroughly reliable and FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE company whose guarantee really has a meaning.
An effective termite treatment must not only eliminate the termites now present in the structure, but also prevent the countless thousands of others, who live in the GROUND outside the house, from returning.
The almost unbelievable cunning of the termite makes the successful treatment of your property a job for those who have the proper equipment and the KNOW HOW. Further, because of the termites tenacity and persistence it is sometimes impossible to completely exterminate them with ONE treatment. Therefore it is vital that the company doing the job be AVAILABLE later to return if necessary. Unless you are SURE of this fact you may find yourself with a "Guarantee" but no one STILL IN BUSINESS to MAKE GOOD.
Always remember—a guarantee is only as good as the man who gives it.
We are local representatives of a reputable and FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE company who are ACCREDITED MEMBERS OF THE OHIO PEST CONTROL ASSOCIATION.

PAINESVILLE Sets Up Memorial For Man Who Developed Pacers
Circuit and by the end of that year their speed and courage gained such great public favor that thereafter no race meeting was complete without pacing races.
In the early days, pacing horses bore such homely names as Sleepy Tom, Sorrell Billy, Straight Edge, Sally, Lucy, Bull Pup or Black Snake, while trotters bore such fancy nomenclature as Membrane, Hambletonian, Royal George, Magna Charta, Abdallah and the like.
Pacers were called "wigglers," "sand shifters," "side-wheelers," "poor man's trotters," and a wide variety of other names in racing jargon.
But by the time Sleepy Tom, a 13-year-old, stone blind gelding, set a new world record for a mile in 2:12 1/4, in the Grand Circuit at Randall in 1879, just defeating Mattie Hunter, driven by a mild mannered young man who had come up north from Tennessee, by the name of Ed Geers—later to be known everywhere as the lovable Pop Geers—the pacers had arrived.
The man who contributed most to the acceptance of pacing horses in big time racing circles was Colonel Billy Edwards, and it is highly fitting that a memorial should be established in his name.
It was his foresight that gave the public Little Brown Jug, Star Pointer, Dan Patch, Billy Direct, Hal Pointer and a host of other famous pacers that have contributed so much to the sport.

Marbles Meet Opening Set
EATON RAPIDS, Mich., June 14—Forty grade school boys, all state titleholders, knuckle down here tonight in the opening round of the 1950 National Marble Championship.
Defending his title in the three-day affair will be 13-year-old Richard Atwell of Fort Dodge, Ia. Atwell, who won a battle over rheumatic fever, outscored 31 competitors in last year's tourney in Pittsburgh.
The contest is sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Marchi Wins
COLUMBUS, June 14—Al Marchi, an unattached pro, fashioned a three over par 74 yesterday in the final 18 holes of the Central District golf open to win the event with a 145-stroke total.

Regatta Set
COLUMBUS, June 14 — The Buckeye Lake Yacht Club will be host to the fifth annual regatta of the Ohio Inter-Club Yachting Association Saturday and Sunday.

Sokolosky's These Days
"The agents also found two letters in Roth's handwriting on plain stationery. The dateline of one was 'American Mission, New Delhi, 21 Jan. 1944.' This letter was addressed to the secretary of state and was signed 'Merrell.' It contained a summary of political comment in the Indian press for the week ended Jan. 15, 1944. The other letter had an identical source and address. It was dated March 14, 1944, and contained reports on the vote of the central legislative assembly on March 13, 1944, passing a motion, 50-48, calling for a reduction in the budget."
There is more of the same.
Why, then, did not the Navy intervene to court-martial Roth? Apparently, he was immediately detached—but why? Suppose your son or mine, in the Navy, were found not involved in an espionage conspiracy, but detected even in some small matter, he would be brought up on charges and severely punished. Why not Roth? They are now blaming it on Jim Forrestal, who, being dead, cannot answer.
Here is an instance which clearly involved the security of the Navy and the country and the fellow goes scot free, and the record is not being opened to the American people to know why.
Certainly, the Navy ought to explain how it happened that Roth was not court-martialed. And if the Navy wants to explain, could it possibly be done in simple English so that everyone can understand it? Certainly, the gobs who got it for not shining their shoes ought to be told why Roth went free.

Wayzoff Wins
WESTBURY, N. Y., June 14—Wayzoff reeled off a 2:05-3/5 mile to cop the featured Manhasset Pace at Roosevelt Raceway last night two lengths ahead of Pure Gold. Syndicator took third.
HUNDREDS of other claimants are now being investigated for possible fraud, Thomas explained, by matching benefit payments with employers' wage record reports.
Cities in which an unusual number of such benefit payments were made include Cleveland, Cincinnati, Toledo, Youngstown, Canton, Mt. Vernon, Dayton, Lima and Norwood.
Thomas explained most employers notify their workers of the weeks for which they are receiving vacation or severance pay.
The most common form of fraud is to claim benefits while receiving wages, Thomas said.
"Eventually we'll catch up with such claimants when we match our weekly benefit payments against employers' reports of wages paid for that same week," he explained.

Maywood Park Feature Split
CHICAGO, June 14 — Major Crusader and Fay Spencer split the $1,600 divided purse trotting feature at Chicago's Maywood Park last night.
Major Crusader finished the mile first heat in 2:07 4/5. Fay Spencer finished second, but was disqualified and placed fourth, moving up Lee Dewey.
Fay Spencer came back to take the second heat, also a mile, in 2:06 2/5, tying the track record. Lee Dewey and Fay Scott again finished two-three.

TERMITES
Cause damage in excess of fifty million dollars annually for REPAIRS alone. These destructive pests work in secret and may be destroying your property NOW. Have it inspected by an expert and be sure. There is no charge for the inspection, and if your property is not infested they will tell you so. If termites are present you will be SHOWN and a fair price quoted for a treatment which is guaranteed for TEN YEARS.

Many irresponsible amateurs—self-styled "exterminators" and "part time" entomologists offer fantastic "guarantees" and bargain prices, but you owe it to yourself to be SURE you are securing the services of a thoroughly reliable and FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE company whose guarantee really has a meaning.

An effective termite treatment must not only eliminate the termites now present in the structure, but also prevent the countless thousands of others, who live in the GROUND outside the house, from returning.

The almost unbelievable cunning of the termite makes the successful treatment of your property a job for those who have the proper equipment and the KNOW HOW. Further, because of the termites tenacity and persistence it is sometimes impossible to completely exterminate them with ONE treatment.

Therefore it is vital that the company doing the job be AVAILABLE later to return, if necessary. Unless you are SURE of this fact you may find yourself with a "Guarantee" but no ONE STILL IN BUSINESS to MAKE GOOD.

Always remember—a guarantee is only as good as the man who gives it.

We are local representatives of a reputable and FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE company who are ACCREDITED MEMBERS OF THE OHIO PEST CONTROL ASSOCIATION.

CHISOX CLIP LEFTHANDER

Yankee '9' Needs Relief For Reliever Joe Page

NEW YORK, June 14—Joe Page relieves everybody on the New York Yankee pitching staff, but—this is a question Manager Casey Stengel hates to ask himself—who relieves Joe Page?

The guy who saved everything but the Brinks payroll in 1949, Page has fallen off in effectiveness so far in 1950.

Summoned with the usual peremptory wave of the Stengel claw in Chicago last night, the gay reliever failed to hold the White Sox in the last of the ninth. Chisolm won, 6 to 5, and the Yankees lost their virtual league-lead tie with Detroit's rocketing Tigers.

It marked Page's fourth defeat in 18 relief appearances this season, and the lefthander has not been looking good.

As much can hardly be said of those Tigers, whose money man, Outfielder Hoot Evers, smacked a tenth-inning homerun to give Detroit a 6 to 5 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics and tumble the once-hopeful Mackmen right into the American League sub-basement.

Detroit's edge over the Yanks is half a game, but Red Rolfe's laddies have a swing of two games in the vital games-lost column.

Philadelphia's slide to the cellar was processed by a double victory over Washington by the St. Louis Browns—who got, of all things, good pitching.

HARRY DORISH five-hit the Nats, 8 to 3 in the first game, and Cliff Fannin four-hit them, 6 to 1 in the lid-locker.

That four-game losing streak of the Boston Red Sox was ended most convincingly in Cleveland. The hitting of Bob Doerr, who listed two homers within a perfect night at bat, and the two-hit pitching of Chuck Stobbs were more than enough to dismiss Bob Feller and the Indians, 8 to 1.

In the National League, meanwhile, those decrepit old folks from St. Louis lead the scamper today by three full games. These Cardinals may not be the Gas-house Gang of old, but if they're not, it's the gas house that's moved away, not the Cardinals.

The best keystone couple in the game—and that, if you please, includes Robinson-Reese, Coleman-Rizzuto, and friends—keynoted the Cards' 6 to 3 victory over the Phils behind elegant lefthanding by Harry Brecheen.

Shortstop Marty Marion poked a two-run single and second baseman Red Schoendienst leveled a two-run double to underwrite the six-run Card doings in the sixth that chased young Curt Simmons to his bath.

Second-place Brooklyn cooperated heartily, meanwhile, by blowing an 11-inning thing to the Chicago Cubs. Roy Smalley's two-run homer off Clarence Podbielniak, fourth Cub grandstand sock of the evening, cashed the bill in behalf of Cub Reliever Frank Hiller. The score came out 6 to 3.

The Boston Braves retained their practical fourth-place tie with the Cubs by coming from behind to unnerve the last-place Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 3. Bob Chipman, whose contrived specialty is beating Cincinnati, held the Reds to three hits in eight and 1-3 innings of relief work. All three of his victories this year have been over Luke Sewell's men.

New York's Larry Jansen had nine strikeouts and permitted only five hits as the Giants blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates in another night game, 7 to 0. That's 11 victories in their last 18 tries for Leo Durocher's kind of team.

Speaking of baseball in general, Joe DiMaggio needs eight hits to go to crack the total of 2,000. The Yankee Clipper doubled in Chicago last night, besides making one of those fleeing catches in centerfield.

Savold's Pilot Still Sniping At IBC Stand

LONDON, June 14—Lee Savold, world's heavyweight "champ" of sorts, donned striped pants, a topper and frock coat today to attend the high-toned horse race meeting at Ascot.

His manager, Bill Daly, first sounded off about reports that the International Boxing Club is planning a heavyweight title fight in Yankee Stadium.

Daly, firmly convinced that there can be no "championship" fight without his oft-beaten "champ," said:

"Under no circumstances will I negotiate with the IBC until they settle their differences with the New York Managers' Guild."

"I am negotiating with Jack Solomons to defend the title in London in September."

The dispute between the IBC and the Managers' Guild is over the division of television receipts.

Savold's claim to the title is based on his technical knockout of Bruce Woodcock in London on June 6, which most boxing commissions claim decided that Savold is the champion of Woodcock or even the champion of White City Stadium in London.

But most agree any lofter claim is little more than "shadow boxing."

Elks Lose Tilt, To Try Again

Scioto Elks softball team, smarting under a 6-1 defeat handed them Tuesday evening, will try it again Wednesday night.

The Tuesday slapping came at the hands of the Circleville Oil team. Wednesday night's joust by the lodgemen will be against Boyers, is booked for 8 p. m. in Ted Lewis Park.

Navy Grid Assist Seen In New Bill

Army Has Edge In Recruiting

NEW YORK, June 14 — Congress has finally gotten around to finding out officially that good football teams are no accident.

The learned legislators in Washington found that out yesterday in listening to the Navy's plea for passage of a bill that would, a Navy spokesman said, put the Midshipmen on an equal basis with West Point on the football field.

Here is the idea: When regular appointees fail to qualify for admission to West Point, the secretary of the Army has the power to do the appointing of other candidates to fill the vacancies.

These vacancies often run to 100 a year, and it is nobody's fault that they are filled now and again by potential cadets who happen also to be good football players.

The Naval Academy does not have the same jurisdiction in filling vacancies. The bill now before the Senate would equalize the situation by giving the secretary of the Navy the same appointive powers for Annapolis as the secretary of the Army has over appointments to West Point.

Furthermore, the bill would lower the minimum age requirements needed for admission to the two service academies.

As it now stands, you have to be 23 to get into Annapolis and 24 to get into West Point.

THAT MEANS that Army has the edge in coming up with experienced football players.

Senator Saltonstall of Massachusetts introduced the football angle into the hearings. He asked a Navy man if he thought the bill would provide better football players.

THE Navy man, without a shred of reticence, said, "Yes, Sir!"

Then Senator Saltonstall asked, possibly unnecessarily, if that, in turn, would improve the caliber of Navy football.

Again he got the quick affirmative. The Navy man said he thought the odds between Army and Navy soon would be even—instead of 5 to 1 Army's favor as they now are.

Since the 1942 ruling giving Army the edge in the matter of filling vacant appointments, Navy has been on the definite underside throughout.

A 21-21 tie in 1948 is the best the Midshipmen have had to show since 1944, having lost the other four games during that time.

Those things rankle the hearts of Navy men. There is nothing worse than losing to Army, or vice versa if you happen to go to West Point.

At the recent Robinson-Villmain fight in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium, which is the annual site for the Army-Navy game, two ensigns had ringside seats. The story that went around was that this was the closest Navy had been to mid-field in two years.

Lenczyk, Kerby Tied In Meet

COLUMBUS, June 14—Former Champion Grace Lenczyk and Betty Kerby led the way today into the sixth women's intercollegiate golf tournament over the Ohio State university Scarlet course.

Each fired a one under par 77 in yesterday's 18-hole qualifier for the tournament proper.

Miss Lenczyk, representing John B. Stetson university, meets Judy Baker of Ohio State in her first-round match today. Miss Kerby, a Barry college junior from Akron, takes on Louise Camentz of the University of Louisville.

Musial Leading Poll Of Stars

CHICAGO, June 14—Stan (The Man) Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals today retained his lead in the second compilation of ballots in the annual All-Star baseball poll.

The poll will determine the starting lineups for the inter-league game in Chicago's Comiskey Park July 11.

Musial held a 65 vote advantage over George Kell of the Detroit Tigers in the individual standings. In the first tabulation, the Cardinal outfielder-first baseman was 142 votes ahead of the 1949 American League batting champion.
